Did You Know Your On-Site Shredding May Be Converted to an Off-Site Contract?

Stericycle, the largest medical waste disposal company in the world recently acquired Shred It, the largest on-site shredding company in the world. While built on the slogan "on-site done right", the company announced a deliberate move to convert all Shred-It clients from on-site to off-site shredding.

The announcement was made during an Earnings Report Conference Call on April 28, 2016. The statement below is taken directly from Stericycle Inc. Earnings Report: Q1 Conference Call Transcript.

"Then you notify the customer. So you're notifying all the customers that are currently on-site and you are letting them know that we are going to be switching their service from on-site shredding with a truck that has a shredder on it, to taking that back to our facility and shredding it back at our facility."

On-Site shredding is a much safer option because the customer is able to view the entire process eliminating the inherent risk in taking your paper off-site. Some of the off-site risks are the truck doors opening in transit allowing paper to blow out, an accident resulting in the exposure of confidential data, or intentional identity theft by employees - all of which have occurred in recent news.
